

Update on Commission's March 3, 2014 Drought Workshop on Small Water Systems

Background

The Commission will host an informational workshop on March 3, 2014 in San Diego, CA to learn more about challenges facing urban and rural small water systems. The focus will be the problems faced by small water systems, the impacts of drought on those systems, and issues pertaining to environmental justice and disadvantaged communities. Representatives from DWR, the California Rural Water Association, the National Integrated Drought Information System (NIDIS) Drought Pilot, the California Association of Mutual Water Companies, and the California Water Plan Update Disadvantaged Community/EJ Caucus co-chairs will provide presentations. The event is open to the public, and Commission staff will be working with DWR, ACWA, and other organizations to promote the workshop.
