

Presentation by Sustainable Conservation on Groundwater Recharge Pilot Projects

Background

Sustainable conservation is a non-governmental organization that “helps California thrive by uniting people to solve the toughest challenges facing our land, air, and water.” The organization partners with the private sector, academia, government and non-profits to develop solutions to a variety of environmental issues. At this meeting Stacey Sullivan, Policy Director for Sustainable Conservation, will brief the Commission on their work with farmers to increase groundwater recharge. This is an informational item.

Contact

Rachel Ballanti
Assistant Executive Officer
California Water Commission
(916) 653-7937